Dawned a coppery Sabbath yesterday and for the best part of the day the obscured rays from a sun that had just emerged from the travail of an annular eclipse gave to things physical a saffron hue. Folks up betimes, for a Sunday morn, were the first to remark upon the choler appearance of things. It was noticeable with the coming of daylight and the saffron tinge was to be discerned until nightfall, now diminishing and now intensifying. Apart from this curious phenomenon, the weather was normal, temperature inclining to the top of the tube and the wind contributing scarcely a breath to relieve humid conditions. The eclipse of the sun was due Saturday, although it was not to be visible in America. Its path began in the Indian ocean and passed over the southwestern and southern portion of Australia. Some people ascribed the bilious appearance of the well and favorably known earth to the eclipse while others, recalling "yellow" days of years that are gone, laid it to forest fires on Worcester mountain, in the hills and on the shores of Lake Michigan in Canada.

With a number of her little companions, the child was playing with a toy motor car, when she lost her balance and fell down the bank. Stickney was called to reduce the fracture and this forenoon the little girl was reported to be resting comfortably.

Eye witnesses of a mishap on the Montpelier road Sunday afternoon aided three women in getting out of an uncomfortable dilemma by guiding their slightly injured horse to the veterinary office of Dr. O. E. Barr on Cottage street for repairs. When the horse became frightened at a passing automobile it bolted so suddenly that the carriage brought up against a pole and was partially demolished. None of the occupants was injured and after applying ointment to an abrasion on one of the horse's legs, the veterinarian allowed the animal to leave the hospital. The mishap occurred near the Barre Monumental yard, commonly known as the Wells-Lamson plant.

NEWSPAPER MAKING DISCUSSED.

Vermont Eastside Publishers Guests of Col. H. E. Parker.

Fairlee, July 31.—Nearly a score of eastside publishers, with a sprinkling from the New Hampshire side, gathered at the Bungalow inn, Lake Morey, Saturday, as the guests of Col. Harry E. Parker, publisher of the Bradford Opinion. Col. Parker entertained the boys as only he knows how and all had a very enjoyable time. The day's program included a sail around the lake, a visit to all points of interest, dinner at 12:30 and a seashore fish dinner at 6 o'clock. Landlord Frank H. Griffin served these in an entirely satisfactory manner.

While the social features were prominent in the day's entertainment, considerable time was given over to the consideration of the more serious matters that perplex and worry the publisher to-day—the rising cost of materials that enter into the making of newspapers, and the dividing line between news and advertising and the elimination of free advertising. It was the unanimous opinion of all the publishers present that with the great increase in the cost of materials all must either raise the subscription price of their publications or increase the advertising rates and discontinue all free advertising.

The Familiar Unknown.
Things you see every day and never notice form a favorite topic with those who probe curiously into our deficiencies. The watch trick is perhaps an open secret by now, and yet you may fall in reproducing the Roman figures that you confront in all modern many times a day. Can you describe the aspect of a shilling, which I hope you see as many times a day, or a penny postage stamp? I am sure that any postal maiden could sell me a dozen penny stamps with the wrong head on them and send me away contented. And yesterday I met a man who had lived for years in happiness on Haverstock hill and couldn't tell me the number of steps that led to the front door of his own house.—London Spectator.

On Second Thought.
"Those men for whom you failed to get government positions were rather indignant."
"Only for a little while," replied Senator Sorghum. "Since they found how much more they can make in private employment they're honestly grateful."—Washington Star.

Manila Hemp.
The fiber of manila hemp varies in length from six to twelve feet and occasionally attains a length of eighteen feet. It is said to possess greater tensile strength than any other fiber known.

In True Proportion.
He (rapturously)—Miss Sweetthing dances as lightly as the ocean foam. She (sweetly)—Indeed she does, and her head is just as light as her heels.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Improving.
"What does the doctor say about your father's condition?"
"He says he ought to be well enough tomorrow to start kicking again."—Detroit Free Press.

Between good sense and good taste there is the difference between cause and effect.—La Bruyere.
